Delivery Terms and Legal Title: Where the subscription price includes print issues and delivery is to the recipient's address, delivery terms are Delivered at Place (DAP); the recipient is responsible for paying any import duty or taxes. Title to all issues transfers Free of Board (FOB) our shipping point, freight prepaid.

Claims for Missing or Damaged Print Issues: Our policy is to replace missing or damaged copies within our reasonable discretion, subject to print issue availability, and subject to the following terms: Title to all issues transfers Freight on Board ("FOB") to the address specified in the order; (1) Freight costs are prepaid by Wiley; and (2) Claims for missing or damaged copies must be submitted by the Customer or Subscription Agent within the claims window, as noted below.

Claims window - General: Claims for missing print issues must be sent to cs-agency@wiley.com (and the Subscription Agent or Customer may be referred to a society) within three months of whichever of these dates is the most recent: date of submission; or date of issue publication.

Claims window - India: Both Subscription Agents and Customers in India have 48 hours after receipt of goods to confirm that all content listed on the packing label has been received. In the event of any discrepancy, SPUR Infosolutions, Wiley's delivery partner in India, needs to be notified within forty-eight (48) hours using this email address: support@spurinfo.com. All claims will be checked against SPUR Infosolutions delivery records before the claim is accepted. The above terms for Wiley's claims policy otherwise apply.

Submit to American Anthropologist

NOTE: Submissions must be via the American Anthropologist online submissions website, <http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/aman>.

American Anthropologist is the flagship journal of the American Anthropological Association and is published on a quarterly basis. American Anthropologist follows the mission statement and goals of the American Anthropological Association by advancing anthropology as a discipline that studies humankind in all its aspects, involving archaeological, biological, ethnological, and linguistic research. It also attempts to further the professional interests of anthropologists by disseminating anthropological knowledge and illuminating its relevance to human problems. The editor of the journal seeks to further the association's mission by publishing articles that add to, integrate, synthesize, and interpret anthropological knowledge; essays on issues of importance to the discipline; research reports; obituaries; and reviews of books, films, videos, and exhibits.

The AA welcomes both manuscripts that originate within a single discipline and those that cross subdisciplines. In choosing articles for publication, the editors' principal consideration is to give preference to those submissions that present material that is important and new in the discipline theoretically, methodologically, and empirically. All other things being equal, the editors will also give preference to articles that demonstrate how anthropological research improves our understanding of issues of cultural significance and practical importance in both the present and past. To the extent possible, the main ideas of articles should be comprehensible to nonspecialists. The editors encourage clear writing and straightforward organization and discourage the overuse of jargon intelligible to only to those with particular theoretical perspectives.

Contributions from all subdisciplines in both their basic and applied dimensions are welcomed, as are those focusing on broad, cross-cutting problems, themes, and theories. Collaborative work is encouraged, and contributions from international colleagues are welcomed. The journal does not charge authors for submission nor charge any publication fees.

Submission Process

Submissions must be via the American Anthropologist online submissions website, <http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/aman>. Figures or photographs should be submitted as TIF files with resolution of 300 dpi or greater. Authors of accepted manuscripts may be required to submit high-resolution hard copies of all figures during production, as not all digital art files are usable. Be sure to also provide a list of captions and be prepared to provide or obtain permission from the copyright holder for figure use.

American Anthropologist follows Chicago style. Submitted manuscripts that do not conform to American Anthropological Association style and format will be returned to authors. For the American Anthropological Association style guide, see http://www.aaanet.org/publications/style_guide.pdf.

Research Articles

Research articles may be anywhere from 2,500 to 8,000 words in length. Initial submissions exceeding 8,000 words (including all figures, tables, references, and notes) will not be considered. If accepted for publication, research articles may be extended up to 10,000 words at the discretion of the associate editors and the editor-in-chief.

American Anthropologist conducts "double-blind" review, which means that reviewers do not know the name of the author whose manuscript they are evaluating. When uploading your manuscript, you will need to upload a manuscript file with no identifying author information (designate this as "Main Document") and a separate title page (designate as "Title Page") with author details. In your manuscript, references to your own work should be anonymized. For instance, if you are Susan Smith, a citation reading "(Smith 2003:13)" should appear as "(Author 2003:13)." However, there should be NO reference to "Author 2003" in the bibliography at all: citations to your own work should be completely omitted from the bibliography at this stage.

If you used any revision or editorial tracking tools in your word-processing program, be sure the final version of your manuscript does not contain tracked changes.

Research Reports

The journal publishes research reports of up to 2,500 words. These are shorter than major articles and are restricted to straightforward presentations of research results. One consideration in judging submissions is the extent to which reviewers and the editor-in-chief think they will be of interest to readers. Research reports are submitted in same way as research articles, although authors should indicate via the drop-down menu whether their work is intended as a report or article.

Proposals for Group Submissions

American Anthropologist welcomes group submissions around any theme or topic, including those organized by a guest editor or editors. It is not necessary to contact the editor-in-chief for permission or feedback before a group of manuscripts is submitted. Such manuscripts should be submitted individually by their authors: it is not necessary to submit them all at once. Introductions or overviews by the group editor(s) should not be submitted at the outset. The manuscripts will undergo the exact same review process as any other manuscript. If more than one of the manuscripts is accepted for publication, it is the responsibility of the authors (or guest editor(s)) to notify the editor-in-chief that the accepted manuscripts are meant to be grouped together. At that point, at the discretion of the associate editors and the editor-in-chief, the guest editor(s) may be invited to submit an introduction or overview to the group submission.

Commentaries

Short commentaries of no more than 1,500 words that further substantive discussion of significant topics that have appeared in American Anthropologist in the previous year may be published at the editor-in-chief's discretion.

For information on submitting book or multimodal anthropologies reviews, public anthropologies and world anthropologies pieces, and obituaries, see <http://www.aaanet.org/publications/reviewsobitscommentaries.cfm>.

Author Responsibilities

Authors, not the American Anthropological Association, are responsible for the content of their articles, for the accuracy of quotations and their correct attribution, for the legal rights to publish any material submitted (incl. supplementary materials such as figures or tables), and for submitting their manuscripts in proper form for publication. Manuscripts submitted to American Anthropologist should not be under simultaneous consideration by any other journal or have been published elsewhere in any form.

Evaluation

Manuscripts are generally evaluated by the editor-in-chief, by one or more members of the editorial board, and/or by referees. Associate editors of the journal may also participate in the review process as needed. Authors are invited to suggest potential reviewers; however, the editor-in-chief will not be bound by these suggestions. Due to the large number of submissions, many manuscripts cannot be accepted for publication.

Early View

American Anthropologist is covered by Wiley's Early View publishing service. Early View articles are complete full-text articles published online in advance of their publication in a printed issue. Articles are therefore available as soon as they are ready, rather than having to wait for the next scheduled print issue. Early View articles are complete and final. They have been fully reviewed, revised, and edited for publication, and the authors' final corrections have been incorporated. Because they are in final form, no changes can be made after online publication. The nature of Early View articles means that they do not yet have volume, issue, or page numbers, so Early View articles cannot be cited in the traditional way. They are therefore given a Digital Object Identifier (DOI), which allows the article to be cited and tracked before it is allocated to an issue. After print publication, the DOI remains valid and can continue to be used to cite and access the article.
